Currey & Company Debuts New Upholstery Collection

Hand-made in North Carolina

Sculpted silhouettes meet rich, tactile fabrics in the new upholstery collection, where every frame and textile is carefully paired. Clean tailoring, considered proportions, and dressmaker-style details like contrast welting, fringe, and embroidery give each piece a striking presence. Made in North Carolina, this collection was created for discerning designers who seek statement furniture crafted by an artisan hand. Orchestrated by the company's Creative Director, Cecil Adams, the collection was envisioned to bring distinctive frames and fabrics that will be readily available to designer customers. Adams shares; "each piece helps tell a style story in the Currey showroom with a focus on natural, sustainable materials that align with our design philosophy and our product mix."

Constance Game Chair, Mandarin Pearl

Mahjong, anyone? Introduce the glamour of a private Mahjong parlor with the Constance Game Chair, Mandarin Pearl. Designed for long evenings of tiles and conversation, it's comfortable enough to keep you seated through every round.

Smooth-rolling castors let you glide up to the table, slide back to celebrate a win, or move the chair wherever the party goes. The Mandarin-inspired fabric sets the tone, and a flash of red shows up in the velvet-lined mini skirt for a peek of color with every turn. To finish it off, a playful pompom fringe takes the design right over the top. It's a joyful statement piece that makes every game night feel like an occasion.

Tristan Bench, Abingdon Jewel and Tristan Chair, Banks Desert

Wrapped in a glorious, printed velvet, the Tristan Bench, Abingdon Jewel, brings an artist's touch to any room. Its pattern recalls the hand-painted designs of the Bloomsbury group, with rich color and a loose, painterly charm. Gracefully curved arms open like the petals of a flower, softening the silhouette and adding a sculptural note. Built on a solid maple frame, the Tristan is perfectly scaled for the foot of the bed. In an entryway it makes a dramatic first impression. The Tristan Chair, Banks Desert, is the companion to the Tristan Bench. A champagne finish catches the light, and the warm desert-pink velvet wraps the chair in soft, inviting color. Its smaller scale makes it easy to place wherever you need a comfortable seat. A pair looks elegant on either side of a fireplace, and a single chair is just as at home in a bedroom corner as it is in a cozy reading nook. Like the bench, it's built on a solid maple frame.

Paula Bench, Lacosta Fern

The Paula Bench, Lacosta Fern, is upholstered with the care of a couture gown. Lush fern-green velvet sets a rich foundation, and dressmaker details finish it beautifully: fabric-covered buttons, a graceful drop skirt, and pleats lined in a complementary fabric that reveal a hint of contrast. Embroidered trim brings the design together, as it accents the bolster cushions, then cascades down each arm and over the skirt on both sides. The Paula is a stunning complement to any room, whether it sits at the foot of the bed or in a sunlit window.

This luxury collection has 15 pieces and will debut at the October High Point Market.
